As we climb to the top of the stairs, where we were accompanied on the wall by busts of nobles, we find ourselves in the midst of lavish illusionist pillar architecture that opens through open windows into the outside world. If we have come from the real nature to the virtual below, here the reality of the castle park opens before us from the virtual architecture through the windows. To this day, two have been preserved, and the third has been moved to the garden of the Dolenjska Museum in Novo mesto as the road widens. The portals formed a park axis that does not derive from the axis of the manor but connects to the path along the southern wing of the manor, which is a characteristic of the Mannerist era of the early Baroque.
