Photo session on our 10th anniversary. This family photo of the group reflects our spirit: a compact team, which is perfectly understood. We have known each other for many years, we have sung together in countless concerts and it shows when we are in front of the public.

José Duce Chenoll, director of Amystis, reported for our early music fans:

Image of a concert in Valencia, the last in which we combine music and dramatized texts. The recovery of the Spanish musical heritage is our main objective. We not only investigate the music written in the peninsula, we also explore the repertoires composed in America and in the Italy of the Spanish crown.

Amystis has set out to bring early music to all kinds of audiences. For this it is necessary to remove it from its usual context. This concert was held in a concert hall where rock, pop, heavy and jazz are performed. A whole experience to be able to speak with new viewers.

Final concert of the III International School of Ministriles held in the city of Requena and organized by the group Los Ministriles de la Reyna and the Hispano-American Society of Early Music. Once again, the voices of Amystis were fused with those instruments of the past, following a very ancient practice, reflected in all the treatises. So, we try to recover the sounds of the past. We returned to interpret the less known music of the Golden Age of Spanish polyphony.

The use of the dulzian was a very widespread practice in the Hispanic world, always accompanying the vocal chapel, as if it were just another voice. Faithful to historically informed practice, Amystis has in its ranks one of the best interpreters in Spain, Ovidio Giménez.

Concert held at the Eivissa Medieval festival. Once again, we take the classic polyphony to the festivals of the country. On this occasion, the historical and architectural setting accompanied our music. Among the audience were members of various specialized groups with whom the feedback at the end of the concert was very interesting.
